Most sincerely yours, with the leading merchants of this city. Most sincerely yours, R. P. ANDREWS, President R. P. Andrews Paper Co.

These men are among the most successful business men of Washington. But we do no want you take any one's word for it. Come in and see for yourself.

One boy who entered our school during the summer of 1914 is now Private Secretar to a Congressman. This school is constantly breaking records. We are not bound by precedents. We have done more to establish clean, wholesome business training in Washington than all other similar schools combined. If you do not believe this watch then

We have many things to make us happy, such as successful graduates, capable teach ers, good health, etc., but best of all is the surprisingly large number of new students to begin tomorrow. It makes us feel that our efforts have been appreciated by the Wise and Select Order of Steward Boosters.

Illusions of George IV.

Until last Sunday, as has been said. no British sovereign had been to the front since George II fought and, much to his disgust, was run away with by his horse at Dettingen. But there were times when it would not have done to tell George IV so. "At certain seasons of inspiration," as Mr. Justin McCarthy puts it, he would describe himself as having led a desperate charge at Waterloo. No doubt his imagination was stimulated by having been taken ver the battlefield by Wellington some years afterward. George IV approved Wellington's conduct in fighting a duel with Lord Winchilsea. Greville tells
